THE FIGHT AT REGINA.

The session of the legislative assembly just closed at Regina, has been the most important of any ever held in the Northwest. While enough useful legislation was enacted, and ordinances passed, to mark it for its business ability, yet the chief interest has centered around the determined fight made for more power, during the closing days of the session. From the first day it was evident that the governor was going back on the fair promises made, and the advanced ground taken, last year, and that the advisory board from which so much was expected, was of very little practical use, owing to the curtailment of their power by the lieutenant governor, who ran things in accordance with his own ideas, than by the advice of his counsellors. And further in the selection of a new board to succeed the old one, no regard was had to the wishes of the assembly, and in consequence Dr. Brett and his colleagues, on taking office, found themselves face to face with a hostile assembly, who refused to sanction their first executive act. The members emphatically refused to accept either them, or any board, that did not possess the confidence of the house, and required, as one of the conditions, that a report of the monies voted last year be made to the house, and the estimates for the coming year, including the federal grant, be voted by them. The governor refused, and in consequence no board is now in existence and the funds have not been voted. The fight was a hard and long one, and the session was prolonged for the purpose of continuing it. All the demands made by the house were not granted, but one thing was accomplished, and that was the governor was forced to select a board representing the views of a majority of the house. The assembly has done all it can, and the fight will now be transferred from Regina to Ottawa, and if the members from the Territories in the Dominion house, are true to the cause of the west, the result will be, a new bill, passed through the next session of the Dominion parliament creating responsible government to the Territories, to be probably followed by another election within a year. If however they are false to their constituents and refuse, at the bidding of their party, to continue the fight so well begun, the desired result may be delayed for some time longer. The fight is the old one, for a greater measure of self government, fought out in different ways, and at some period of their history, by very enlightened people, in the world. The rights the people of the west are now asking for through their representatives on the floor of the house, were demanded at the point of the bayonet by Mackenzie and Papineau, in Eastern Canada, over fifty years. They were granted then and will be now. The tendency of the age is towards Democracy, and English speaking, and thinking people, the world over, will depose any king or government that denies to them the right to govern themselves, in matters in which they only are concerned. This is certainly the feeling in the Northwest. The people of this country, representing as they do, the best intelligence and most enlightened sentiment of Canada, are determined to no longer submit to be misgoverned by a body of men, many of whom know absolutely nothing about the needs of the west. Naturally those who live here, and whose every interest, financial and social, is in the country, think they are in a better position to know what is best for the country, than either the man who represents, not the people he governs, but his masters at Ottawa, or the Dominion authorities, made up largely of men from other provinces, where the conditions are entirely different.

from those in the west. The dead set made by the assembly last week will show the federal government, as nothing else short of rebellion would, the determination of the people of the Territories to have a larger measure of self government than the powers that have hitherto been willing to concede to them. One of three things must result from the stand taken, either the assembly must give in and confess itself beaten; their demands be granted; or a deadlock in the business of government occur. The former would be to stultify themselves, and the latter would be disastrous. To concede the demands made is the only safe and sensible course to pursue and one that must be pursued sooner or later, and to do it now would save much agitation and trouble in the future.

ASSEMBLY NOTES.

The quarrel between the lieutenant governor and the assembly was the event of the week. The majority of the members refused to accord the new board their confidence, on the grounds, that they did not represent the sentiment of the members in making a retrograde step from the position accorded the board, by the governor last year. The debate on Clinkskill's motion of condemnation, was both lengthy and spirited, the best debating power of the assembly was displayed by those who were fighting for more power and responsibility, while the members of the board made a hard struggle in defense of their action. The argument advanced by those who were opposed to the board was, that the position they took was a retrogression from that taken last year, and one that should not have been assumed without the consent of the house, and in doing so they had betrayed the house. The contention of the board was that the position of the board a year ago was only an assumed and not an actual one, and that the powers granted to them now were all the act, under which they were working, allowed them, and that they could not expect more.

The discussion on Haultain's motion to repeal that clause in the act, allowing officers of the mounted police to become justices of the peace showed that the assembly was unanimous, in favor of the amendment. In the early days when the country was sparsely settled, and good men, outside the force, were hard to find, the law was necessary. But conditions have changed and plenty of good men can now be secured, who do not combine in themselves the two offices of policemen and judge. One of the chief evils of the law was that subordinate officers in the force were dictated to, in their positions as magistrates by the officer in charge of the force, who had no more right to do so than any member of the house. Proof would be forthcoming to show that sentences had been changed at the dictation of the chief officer.

The report of the lieutenant governor's legal advisor, re the Belrose school matter, was to the effect, that he found no case against any of the parties concerned.

A resolution was passed strongly urging on the government of Canada the importance of putting an end finally to all half breeds claims, with as little delay as possible.

Considerable discussion took place on the fish question. It was contended that large numbers of fish were unlawfully caught and exported. The Edmonton member said, that in his district fishing was a matter of actual livelihood with many, and he thought they should not be too strict in enforcing the very letter of the law. They should protect the lives of the people as well as of the fish. A resolution was carried asking the Dominion government to appoint inspectors where there are none now, and to rigidly enforce the fishery regulations.

The game ordinance was amended by inserting clauses; to protect plover, as well as snipe. Extending the close season for ducks until September 1st; to prohibit the catching of beavers with traps; providing for a fine of $100 for killing buffalo at any time, in any part of the Territories, and placing Indians on the same footing as white men, by repealing the clause which formerly exempted them from the provisions of the ordinance.

Mr. Haultain's bill for the collection of debts under $100 provides for the following mode of procedure. The plaintiff files his account with the clerk of the court, who sends a notice to the defendant, and if the claim is disputed, the judge fixes a day for the hearing, when both parties appear before him, without a lawyer if they choose, and he hears the case in a summary manner. If the account is not disputed, plaintiff has judgment entered.

The resignation of the first and second advisory boards with the governor's replies, were laid before the house, and on motion of Ross were ordered to be printed in the journals of the house.

The debate resulting from Dr. Brett's motion to go into committee of supply with Haultain's amendment not to go, was very hot. Haultain led the attack on the advisory board, and was well supported by the others. Such terms as "false to the country," "traitors," "base," were frequently heard during the debate and at times two or three members would be striving to speak at once.

GENERAL.

J. W. Tyrell of Hamilton, who was with Lieutenant Gordon in the steamer Alert on the Hudson's Bay expedition in 1855-'80, says New England whalers annually enter the waters of the bay and capture prizes which Canadian capitalists do not think worth looking after. He found nothing to interfere with navigation during July, August, September and October, and that for another month vessels would, with a chance of some delay, be able to make their trips. A railway to Churchill, or some other point on the bay, and a line of steamers to connect with it, would not only afford a much needed outlet for the Canadian Northwest, but would be the means of developing the Hudson's Bay itself.

Macleod Gazette: We would suggest the advisability of the assembly resigning in a body at the end of the present session. The country will support them, for the people feel that they have been fooled with long enough. From past experience, responsible government can only be wrung from the government by a crisis in our affairs. Our experience has proved that we must have responsible government no matter how serious the crisis. Messrs. Royal and Davin may not think so, as the dispenser and receiver of patronage, but it has about arrived at the stage when the people of these territories don't care a rush what Messrs. Royal and Davin think about anything.

It was resolved at a meeting of the University Council, of the University of Manitoba, to take up the work of teaching. Hitherto the university has been an examining body only, the work of teaching being left to the affiliated colleges. There are to be chairs established in three departments. One chair to cover chemistry, geology and biology and physiology, the second to cover higher mathematics and the third, modern languages, in all seven professors.

One hundred and ten coyotes were killed by dogs, kept for the purpose, on the Cochrane ranch, in one month, this fall, and they are still at it.
